

FILM FUN

PRICE 10 CENTS

SUBSCRIPTION $1.00 PER YEAR

F E B R U A R Y

And The Magazine of Fun, Judge's Library and Sis Hopkins' Own Book Combined

A STARTLING STORY!!

"Confessions of a Motion Picture Actress"

BEGINS IN THIS NUMBER

Free Book on Signal Engineering

THERE are thousands of miles of railroad that must be equipped with block signal systems. To superintend these installations and to maintain the systems now in use thousands of men are necessary. Golden opportunities are offered. Every ambitious man in America should write for the free book on Signal Engineering. It will be sent to you prepaid—without obligation. Send the coupon now.

Men Are Needed to Accept High-Salaried Positions

Department of Signaling

Dept. 1592 — 1810 Wilson Avenue
Ravenswood Station, Chicago, Illinois

Gentlemen:—Please send me absolutely free and prepaid your big new book on Signal Engineering. Also full particulars about your great special free outfit offer. It is distinctly understood that I assume no obligations of any kind.

When you stop to consider that, at the present time, less than one-fourth of the passenger lines in this country are equipped with automatic block signal systems—and when you read that the day is fast coming when the law will compel railroads to install them, you will realize what remarkable opportunities are offered to ambitious men in the profession of Signal Engineering. The work is big — broad — high salaries are paid. $250.00 a month is an ordinary salary for a Signal Engineer.

Send the Coupon!

Put your name and address in the coupon, or a letter or post card now and get the free book about Signal Engineering. Too, we will tell you how you can get the training that you need in order to become a Signal Engineer. You will be under no obligation by writing for this free book. Do it now.

Department of Signaling

Dept. 1592 — 1810 Wilson Avenue
Ravenswood Station, Chicago, Illinois

Name.....

Address.....

Age.....Occupation.....

JAN 25 1917

©CLB383425

Magazine of Fun, Judge's Library and Sis Hopkins' Own Book Combined.

Published monthly by

LESLIE-JUDGE COMPANY, PUBLISHERS, NEW YORK CITY.

John A. Sleicher, President. Reuben P. Sleicher, Secretary. A. E. Rollauer, Treasurer. Grant Hamilton, Art Director. Elizabeth Sears, Editor
225 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK.

Copyright, 1917, by Leslie-Judge Company, Publishers.
Title registered as a trade-mark.

Entered at the post-office at New York
as second-class matter.

Single Copies, 10 Cents

No. 335—FEBRUARY, 1917

Subscription by the Year, $1.00

EDITORIALS

A Tribute to a New Art

PRESIDENT AND MRS. WILSON celebrated their first wedding anniversary by going to a motion picture show. It is said that it was their first visit to a motion picture. We are inclined to take that statement with a grain and a half or maybe two grains of best table salt. Surely any two people who have been so frequently and persistently photographed as President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson must, at some time or other, have yielded to the temptation to slip into the last row of a picture theater, if only to see how they looked on the screen.

But to celebrate a wedding anniversary by devoting an entire evening to a feature film is another thing. It marks a democracy of spirit that is not above being entertained by a new art that has already leveled class spirit in its relation to amusement. We are glad to welcome the President and his wife into the ranks of the picture fans. As a means of entertainment, the motion picture is always at hand. As a strong factor in the promotion of political publicity, it has been used for practically the first time in the recent political campaign. Perhaps that is why President Wilson has been moved to give it the public seal of his approval.

Competition

MARY GRAY PECK, a most efficient member of the Motion Picture Committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who is now making an extensive travel campaign for better motion pictures, declares that the motion picture is the first rival that has ever been able to successfully compete with the saloon.

Thus far William Jennings Bryan, that gentle dove of peace, who ever hovers in the rear of conflict, has not turned his attention to the motion picture as a successful rival of the saloon. Brother Bryan prefers oratory; but oratory as a weapon has never made much headway on the thorny path of intemperance. The one thing that has done more to defeat the saloon than any influence the world has produced is the motion picture house. The saloon may well look upon it as the greatest competitor the price of a drink has ever had to meet. A picture program lasts well over an hour. The influence of a drink cannot outlast that.

Are Men Stars Doomed?

THE MALE screen star seems to be having a struggle for existence. A prominent company has recently declared against him. They say men stars do not draw. The public clamors for the staresses.

Even the schoolgirl wants the beautiful lady star to adore. She admires the beauteous creature who does the hero parts, but her ardent sympathies lie with the charming star whose curls cluster coquettishly on her neck and who emerges triumphantly from every situation.

Naturally she does. For there is a chance that she, herself, could become such a star. She worships the staress because of her ambitions. No longer is the adoring schoolgirl content to worship the hero from afar. She yearns to become a star for herself and outshine him on his own ground.

It is becoming difficult to get boys for the pictures. They know they stand no chance. In a recent production a director advertised for 500 boys for a motion picture. If he had advertised for 500 girls, every one of the 500, accompanied by a special friend, would have stormed the gates half an hour before the time set. It was a struggle to get half the number of boys. They were either in school or at work or the price offered did not tempt them.

"CONFESSIONS OF A MOTION PICTURE ACTRESS"

Beginning in this number, Film Fun will print a series of articles which will throw a bit of limelight on conditions in the motion picture business as the author of these articles has found them. The identity of the writer necessarily must remain a mystery. It is enough to say that she was well known in the world of drama before she entered the motion picture field, where she has also scored successes and where she has been in a position to know personally of the incidents mentioned in this series. She writes with a graphic pen and a strong sense of dramatic values and gives a most startling expose of actual happenings in motion picture offices and studios. You cannot afford to miss a single chapter.

HOWEVER painful the truth about a thing may be, it is good for the soul to tell it once in a while. To throw the limelight of publicity on the secrets of the inner chamber has at times a purifying effect on a whole organization. Accumulations of dirt and dust will remain hidden in the dark corners of a room as long as the light does not penetrate to those dark corners; but once a bright searchlight illumines the dirt heap, the filth is then swept to the center of the room, gathered up in a dustpan, thrown in with the other refuse and sent on its way to the purifying fires of the garbage furnace. And so I hope, before very many more years roll by, that a little light may filter in onto the unhappy and sordid conditions obtaining behind the sacred portals of motion picture studios.

An actress knows that thoughts are things and in time write themselves in lines on the face. And that must never happen, especially to a moving picture actress. With a frankly brutal camera recording the expression of each tiny muscle of the face, she well knows that she can keep her public only so long as she remains young looking, sweet expressioned and freshly pretty. She must keep cheerful, even if she dies in the attempt.

But, oh! sometimes, in spite of all my efforts to keep cheerful, I do get just so blue, sometimes I feel I want to be blue—dark, indigo blue!

I know it is proper and Christian-like to be happy and rejoice over the success of others, and I have so rejoiced often in the past and will try to continue to do so. But sometimes, when an unknown actress, with no claim to ability, talent, personality or brains (brains do show on the screen, though some managers delude themselves into thinking they do not), and not even possessing what we term in "movie" vernacular "screen looks"—when such an actress as I have described has her name blazoned forth in a huge electric-light sign, and the press comes forth with a glowing tribute to the extraordinary beauty and talent of the new star, then it is that I become so indignant I can almost explode like good, old-fashioned Fourth of July fireworks. Being on the inside and having had a few experiences of my own, it does not require more than the most ordinary imagination to ponder how and why it happened. The injustice and untruth of it plunge me for a time into the depths of despair. I've tried so hard to "arrive" by fair and honest means—I keep pegging along—and I say to myself, "Genius is patience and an infinite capacity for hard work." If 'tis so, I've outstripped the "Divine Sarah"; but I cannot seem to convince the managers that if they would only give me a real chance, I know I'd prove a "box-office attraction."

What is the trouble? I make a good start, get sincere praise for my work, the public like me when they occasionally get a chance to see me on the screen—one of the big producers, witnessing my work in a small part, even went so far as to make the remark that I was a genius—I photograph well, and am told I have that intangible something that means more than all the other attributes put together—"screen personality." But I get just so far, and then everything stops, and I have to begin all over again. I am not ashamed to say that the only bona-fide offer to be featured in pictures that I ever had came from one of the heads of a very wealthy new concern, but the conditions of the offer were so revolting as to be instantly dismissed. Some day, however, a straightforward, genuine, clean proposition will be made to me, and I promise you I am going to spend my first week's salary in advertising, and I am going to announce the fact to the whole moving picture world in flaring headlines, beginning with "Stop, look and listen, for a wonderful thing has happened," etc., etc.

"If I get this position for you, will you be nice to me?"

It all began quite a long time ago. I was six years old, and I am now one year younger than dainty Marguerite Clark's professional age. It was my first year in school, when, exhibition day coming, I was chosen, with two other little girls, to take part in a three-cornered dialogue. We were to be little flower girls, and on the important day I had on a crisp, white, stiffly starched dress, a lovely blue silk sash, and a tiny basket with morning-glories in it. Each little girl had a verse to speak, and I remember the first line of mine well. It ran like this: "I am the gentle convolvulus flower." I was quite intoxicated with my importance and at playing I was a flower, but I haven't the faintest idea why I should have had to struggle with that dreadful word, "convolvulus," when I was only a little morning-glory. However, the dark seed was sown, and later on, on the stage and more recently on the screen, ever since I was that little "morning-glory," I've been playing at being things and persons that I am not, although sometimes I play my simple self. After this, my first appearance, no school program was quite complete without me; Thanksgiving and Washington's Birthday and Lincoln's Birthday found me with a new recitation added to my ever-increasing repertoire.

And then came time for me to go to high school, and there I joined the dramatic club, and we put on one-act plays and little plays in French and Shakespeare, of course. In all of these productions I always had a star part. These days drawing to a close, I began to send for college curriculums. I wanted to go to the one where I could learn the most about the drama. My stage ambitions were burning very brightly now. I had just about decided on my alma mater, when the thing happens that does sometimes—my father's illness. His business failed, the family exchequer became depleted, and it suddenly dawned upon me that playtime was over and it was up to me to find some way to support myself, or at least to make my contribution to the household expenses.

So I took stock of myself. I had good looks, large, expressive eyes, well-shaped head, a quantity of soft, fluffy hair, and I was small—and that meant a great deal, the present day favoring so strongly the little woman. It didn't take me long to decide what I wanted to do—I knew that always. I wanted to go on the stage. But I had something else to consider besides my desire and my ambition—I had to do something where I could be somewhat assured of earning a little money. I could get some sort of office work and go to night school and learn stenography, and in six months' time earn twelve dollars a week; but I hated offices and office work, and I soon discovered that I never could make more than twenty dollars a week if I remained a stenographer all my life. And then the thought came to me—I could be a nurse and take myself off the family's hands. Nursing would mean two years' training, and then I could earn twenty-five and thirty dollars a week, and during the two years I would be studying at the hospital I would have my home there, and my dresses, aprons and caps would be furnished. But I didn't want to be a nurse. I had no inclination that way whatever. I only wanted the one thing I had always loved, and, oh! I did want that so much, and I knew I'd never be satisfied in this world until I tried it; and so I went on the stage, and then, later, I went into pictures.

In the city where I lived there was a stock company that played all through the year, and two other theaters that housed traveling companies. These traveling companies sometimes played a week, and sometimes would stay six or eight weeks, putting on a repertoire of plays. First I went down to the all-year stock company, thinking that would be the best to connect with. It so happened that a play was being rehearsed that required a lot of extra people. I was told to see the stage director, which I did, and he engaged me. I had to furnish two dresses—a ball gown and a street dress—and I was to receive three dollars and a half a week. But I was happy! Soon I discovered that the stage director was a member of the same lodge that my father was, and a letter from my father influenced the stage director to give me a small part, and so in the next bill I had about a three-minute scene with the leading man, and received seven dollars and a half for the week. A year later I got a contract to play "bits" at twenty dollars a week. I had made my start!

It is an accepted fact that in any career the "start" is the only hard part. This, no doubt, holds of many professions and businesses, but not so on the stage or in pictures. There you are continually making new "starts," unless some man of influence or money comes to your rescue. In motion pictures he can save you from many material discomforts—from weary rounds of the agencies, from waiting hours in the outer offices and wasting smiles and entreaties on office boy or telephone girl, from insults from ignorant men who a year or so before were probably shoe clerks or chauffeurs; but, of course, the man of influence or money who comes to your rescue doesn't do so because he likes to admire at a distance the color of your hair or eyes. Getting in to see some producers requires the strength of Hercules and the patience of Job. One motion picture magnate, who has all his offices and studios in the East, is much more difficult to get to than the President of the United States. A very clever newspaper man has been trying to see this same manager for two months and hasn't seen him yet. Not long ago this same man had occasion to seek an interview with our President, and fifty minutes after he stepped off the train in Washington, D. C., he was in conference with the first citizen of the land. So if a man with years of newspaper experience in getting to people tries for two months to see a producer without success, you will appreciate what the poor, struggling motion picture artist is up against.

So, to continue my narrative, after having made my "start" in my home town stock company and having saved the price of a railroad fare to New York, possessing a modest wardrobe and enough money to live on for two months, I fell for the lure of New York City and the hope of a metropolitan engagement. Arriving in Manhattan, I joined the mad throng of Thespians haunting the dramatic agencies, "looking for work." It didn't come. One day I met a friend. We exchanged greetings, which in the theatrical parlance of that day usually consisted of:

"Doing anything?"

"No; I cannot seem to connect up."

"Ever try moving pictures?"

"No; I don't know anything about them. How do you get in and whom do you see?"

This all happened in 1910, before the agencies began actively placing people in pictures as they do to-day. I made a note of whom to see and the best way to go about it, as told me by my friend, and set out to apply for an engagement at one of New York's motion picture studios. Sorry I cannot chronicle the fact that I participated in the now famous "good old Biograph days," for I worked almost everywhere but there. I secured a hearing, and a few days later was sent for by a producer for a "part." The remuneration was to be ten dollars a day, and I was mighty thankful to get it. Things went along fairly well in this first company I affiliated with, and there I served my moving picture apprenticeship. I was always conscientious in my work, and it suddenly dawned upon me that those who took it much easier than I did, and who had no more pleasing physical attributes or talent than I had, were getting along better than I. They were selected to play in the finer pictures and were given showier "parts."

Once when seeking, out home, an engagement with a visiting stock repertoire company, I had an experience, the memory of which has often come back to me these days. I was very young, and my knowledge of the world was pitifully limited. The manager of the theater kept me coming in 'most every day to see him about this particular engagement. One day he read a letter to me from the owner of this visiting company with which I was hoping to "sign," in which was said, "Am in favor of young blood and am satisfied with your word as to the young girl you speak of. Will be glad to use her as ingenue with the company." This was one of the great moments of my life. My eyes fairly danced, my heart beat wildly, and the color mounted to my cheeks. And then he added, "Now, if I do this for you, will you be nice to me?" In all innocence I answered, "I'd always be very grateful to you. Good-day."

I didn't get the engagement, and it wasn't until some years later, and I had knocked about a bit and the "green" had washed off me, that I understood why. So when I came to this "stand-still" position in my motion picture work, the incident of former years often came to my mind, and I thought to myself, "I wonder! Are motion pictures going to be like that, too? Is it going to be just as hard to get on unless you are 'nice' to someone in authority? Are there to be the same temptations? Is it inescapable, I wonder?"

Had I known then what I know now, I would have been happier had I secured work in a department store and measured ribbons for a living!

(To be continued.)

In Film Town

By JAMES G. GABLE

AMOS BILLDUSH never goes to a photoplay. His father is blind, too.

Maymae Bilks says she knows she was born to be a great screen actress, for her false hair curls just like Mary Pickford's.

Percy Fitz Miggle says that his ideal is the clever girl that can wear a baby stare while watching "Damaged Goods" and get away with it.

Old Man Simpkins, our shoe-repair man, says he is going to see "A Traffic in Soles," when it comes, as he believes in knowing all about his chosen profession.

They had a pie social out to Crow Ridge Saturday night. Ot Powell set down on a custard pie and siled his new nine-dollar suit. Ot says it made him look like a Keystone hero.

Lem Bates took his best girl to the picture show twice last week. Deacon Gubsing says the extravagance of the rising degeneration is just naturally tempting Providence.

Of the fourteen girls and five boys at high school, sixteen have announced their determination of becoming screen actors. The other three were absent the day the poll was taken.

Asa Sproggins says that the things they do to Mary Pickford in "Poor Little Pepperpot" ain't right, and that if she will come to Crick Neck Creek, he'll make her queen of his heart and his hundred acres.

We have been greatly worried over our two leading amusements. Last night the passenger train was twenty minutes behind time, and as a result the Motion Picture Palace was a half an hour late in opening.

Percy Fitz Miggle bet four bits that Deacon Gubsing would be the first one to buy a ticket for "The Evil Women Do." Deacon Gubsing says that the gambling and irreverence of the rising degeneration is almost past belief.

Deacon Gubsing says he would like to have a moving picture of himself taking up the collection. Percy Fitz Miggle says it would be more fun to see a close-up of the deacon's face when he separates himself from a nickel and adds it to the collection.

Percy Fitz Miggle, our leading—and only—tonsorial artist, went to Scroggins Center last week. Hi Jenks accused him of going there just to see "Where Are My Children?" but Perce only winked and said nothing. Deacon Gubsing says that the wickedness of this day and age exceeds that of Soda and Gaborrow.

Absolutely

Actor's wife—If I should die, would you forget me?

Actor—Heavens, no! My dyspepsia is incurable.

IN THE picture, "Miss George Washington," Marguerite Clark does not always exactly follow the established theory on which the truth-telling reputation of George Washington is founded; but you can tell from the way she looks that in her heart she really does approve of George and of his predilection for telling the truth.

Do you wonder that, when the Queen asked her mirror that old, old question,

"Mirror, mirror, on the wall, Who's the fairest one of all?"

it always answered, "Snow White"? Even George Washington looks inclined to agree with that.

WHEN Marguerite Clark was a little girl, she read "Snow White"—as most little girls do—and she says that sometimes she used to dream that she was the charming little princess who had such interesting adventures. And who can say that these are not the days of "dreams come true"? For here she is as Snow White.

Marguerite Clark

IN TWO OF HER RECENT PLAYS, "SNOW WHITE" AND "MISS GEORGE WASHINGTON."

McCLURE PICTURES

Nance O'Neil makes all her women friends green with envy.

FOX FILM CORPORATION

Virginia Pearson likes fur hats and stoles—and quaint rings, as per the picture.

WORLD FILMS

WHITE PHOTO

Alice Brady really doesn't wear them in this fashion, of course.

LASKY

Fanny Ward was not satisfied with having the beautifullest moleskin coat in the country—she raised the moles herself on her English estate.

Every Woman Loves Furs.

FURS never were so expensive as they have been this season, and consequently every screen actress has been mad about furs. It makes mighty little difference what the fur is—anything from a rare silver fox or a beautiful sable to the remnants of old gray Tabby, who used to lead a domestic life, catching mice and raising families. Tabby disappears now and reappears in stoles, muffs and trimming strips on the most gorgeous costumes. The coon who used to roost high in trees and eye the hunters and the dogs below with a merry twinkle is now a rare bird, so to speak, and the cunning little mole, who used to be such a nuisance in plowing ridges in the carefully shaved lawns, is now swelling around with a lot of importance, since his skin has gone up to seventy-five cents each. New York, if you please, has become the center of the fur trade since the war.

PACH PHOTO NEWS INC.

Lucille Lee Stewart's bank account always moans in despair when she is turned loose in a furrier's. We would say that she was a good picker. Don't you?

Bessie Love in "The Heiress at Coffee Dan's"

TRIANGLE-FINE ARTS

Carl, the erratic musician (Frank Bennett), forgets, in a truly artistic and temperamental manner, to eat the food Waffles has placed before him. But, then, no one who knows that Waffles is Bessie Love could blame him for that, we are sure. Even the certain charms of "ham and——" sink into insignificance before her.

TRIANGLE-FINE ARTS

Yes, this is Waffles, not pigtailed now, but fluffed and ruffled, and not so happy as she was at Coffee Dan's. Which would tend to show that it is not always pretty clothes that make for happiness—at least, not in the case of a girl like Waffles. For of what use are pretty clothes when the one man may not see them?

A Variation

Waffles, the waitress at Coffee Dan's, is selected by Bert Gallagher and Clara Johnstone, a pair of crooks, to represent a missing heiress, whose story they have read about in the papers. Waffles herself was orphaned at an early age and, remembering nothing of her childhood, believes the story and convinces the lawyer that she is the bona-fide heiress. Mrs. Johnstone installs Waffles in a beautiful house, appointing herself chaperon. But, with unlimited means, Waffles has only three desires—to publish the music written by her sweetheart, Carl Miller; to adopt the baby that a Mrs. O'Shaughnessy is too poor to care for, and to buy the little restaurant for her old benefactor, Shorty Olson. Mrs. Johnstone prevents her from doing all these things, cleverly breaks up the friendship between Carl and the girl, and persuades the latter to become engaged to Gallagher. Just before the ceremony, however, Carl learns the truth, prevents the marriage, the police arrive just in time, and the crooks go to jail. The real heiress turns up, and Waffles goes back to the hash house. But for the crooks' arrest they receive fifteen hundred dollars, so Shorty buys Coffee Dan's, Carl publishes his music, Waffles adopts the baby, and they all live happy ever after.

"Original plot number seven" the whole thing might be labeled; but along comes charming Bessie Love to the rescue to play Waffles, and it makes not the slightest difference whether the plot is original or not. You'll like this picture—it's on the white list.

LASKY-PARAMOUNT

Marie Doro viewing with apparent approval her own interpretation of the title part in "Oliver Twist." Queer what a lot of difference a few good clothes make, isn't it? And little did Charles Dickens dream, when he wrote the story, that some day it would be visualized so successfully.

LASKY-PARAMOUNT

A few Dickens characters brought to life by top-notchers on the screen. There is Marie Doro, of course, as Oliver Twist; Tully Marshall as Fagin, Hobart Bosworth as Bill Sikes, and Raymond Hatton as the Artful Dodger. You are picking a good show when you go to see "Oliver Twist."

Max Linder

"WHY, you're dead!" someone greeted Max Linder at the wharf.

"I am not," replied Linder, sticking his hands deep into his trousers pockets and smiling his inimitable smile. "Don't believe everything you see in the papers."

And if anyone ever looked less like a dead one than this European barrel of fun, which Essanay is preparing to empty upon the American public, we'd like to see him. And besides being a very-live wire, he is a very brave man as well. When the war broke out, he entered the army as a volunteer and for some time was an automobile scout, using his own machine. After his car was blown up by a bomb, by which he was not injured, he was enlisted in the artillery service.

At the battle of Aisne he was shot through the lung, just above the heart. This would be sufficient experience for most men, but, when recovered, Linder joined the aeroplane service. His lungs could not stand the change of air in rising to the necessary heights, however, and he was honorably discharged. Whereupon he accepted a proposition to come to America to make pictures.

As it is his first visit to these shores, the celebrated comedian is having a pretty hard time getting acquainted with American customs, for although he speaks German, French, Spanish

ESSANAY

Max Linder, the French comedian, emphatically denies that he was killed in the war. He sends us a recent picture to prove his assertion.

and Italian, he knows hardly a word of English. Of course he carries an interpreter, but the latter seems to find as much trouble as Max in making Americans understand them. Perhaps it was because of this, or perhaps because of a little natural hesitation in telling his age, that when we asked Max how old he was, he chattered with the interpreter in Italian for two minutes, then in Spanish for three minutes, then in German for four minutes, and then in French for five minutes, before we succeeded in getting "Thirty-two."

Though why he should hesitate is more than we can understand. To be famous at thirty-two is quite a feat, we think.

She Knew the Way

Writer—I have a writer in this scenario. I want to get rid of him, but I don't know how to manage it.

His wife—Why don't you starve him out?

A Tight Squeeze

Kriss—Is Short, the movie actor, being pressed for money?

Kross—Yes; but his creditors can't squeeze a cent out of him.

The Natural Way

Movie actor—Act the part of an idiot?

Director—All you have to do is to act your natural self.

"THE HONOR SYSTEM"

WILLIAM FOX

When this scene from "The Honor System" was shown at Sing Sing, by permission of the warden, the members of the Mutual Welfare League forgot prison welfare and yelled encouragement to the escaping convicts. The film makers accepted it as a real compliment.

THEY tell us in the Book of Statistics that 500,000 people are led in and thrust out the gates of our penal institutions every year. And at that, nearly all of us know a few more who ought to be there. Be that as it may, some of our prisons are not exactly comfortable, even though the inmates are there for punishment and not for reforming purposes merely. "The Honor System," produced by William Fox, written by Henry Christeen Warnack, and directed by R. A. Walsh, is a timely bit of prison propaganda. Aside from its mission, it is a gripping story, although there is a bit too much "sob stuff" inserted for the people who enjoy having a good cry over other people's miseries. The snake scene could easily be eliminated, without interfering in any way with the punch in the picture. It was filmed in Yuma and Florence, in the Arizona State prisons, and — listen — 600 convicts actually took part in it. It is a story of a young American inventor, who finds himself in prison for a murder committed in self-defense. The evils of the old prison regime are exhibited in all their horror. Not a scene is overdrawn, for not so long ago such scenes could be seen daily in many a State prison. The young inventor, through the interest of the warden's daughter, gets a parole of a few days to perfect his invention of a wonderful wireless. He means to get back on time, but some of his enemies seek to prevent it. He eventually gives up his life for the honor system.

FOX

Gladys Brockwell, who plays "Trixie Bennett," in "The Honor System," says she has worked hard at her art for fifteen years. She went on the stage when she was three years old. Still, Gladys, you are a star now.

Whether or not you believe with some prison welfare workers that the majority of convicts are not normal, or whether you believe with others that they are normal and only need guidance and not discipline, this picture is a worth-while one, barring, as we have said, a few scenes that could be cut out without detracting from the strength of the story. All convicts do not reform immediately on hearing a hymn sung by a beautiful girl. Some may—but not all.

FOX William Farnum in "Battle of Hearts."

FOX Vivian Martin in "Merely Mary Ann."

"Ben Blair."

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Frank McIntyre in "The Traveling Salesman."

The Thriller

As Viewed by the Audience

By HAZEL MACFARLANE

SCHOOL GIRL TO HER CHUM

"He's marvellous! Just marvelous!
So handsome, strong and brave!
Oh, how I wish that stupid Jim
Was just a little bit like him!
I rave, my dear, I rave!"

REGULAR BOY, WHO DOESN'T FIND ENOUGH BLOOD AND THUNDER

"Come on, dere! Say, wot's wrong wid youse?
Dat makes me weary! Gee!
Youse call that sof' soap stuff a fight?
Gimme me coin back. It's not right
To woik dat game on me!"

NERVOUS OLD LADY

"Oh, dear! I wish I hadn't come!
They're killing him! Oh! Oh!
Why don't they send for the police?
John, I can't watch this awful piece,
I'll really have to go!"

L'ENFANT TERRIBLE, WHO HAS BEEN THREATENED WITH HOME

"Well, momma, if you take me home
Just watch me snitch on you!
Got Ben an' me in for a dime
An' him fifteen at Christmas time.
Quit pinchin' me. Boo, hoo!"

WINTER SPORTS

VITAGRAPH

Every winter Dorothy Kelly takes a week or two off up in the New Hampshire hills. With plenty of furs, of course, one can keep warm in a sleigh if the driver—well—

VITAGRAPH

Lillian Walker internes her auto at the first snowfall and gets Dobbin and the sled out of the moth balls. She loves the snow, that girl.

WORLD FILM CORP.

Frances Nelson doesn't mind a tumble in a snowdrift. Not when Robert Warwick is near to help pick her up. Lots of girls might envy Frances. They are crazy about Robert.

FOX

Gracious, but William Farnum looks stern. And he is nearing the "End of the Trail," too. A woolen scarf may make a nice, warm sash, but should he not wear it on his neck?

SNOW SHOWS

WILLIAM FOX

"Make it long and lingering," said the director of "A Modern Thelma." And the funny part of it is that Harry Hilliard doesn't seem to mind at all, though it's awfully cold and the people in the sleigh are getting impatient. But, then, things do look pretty warm and friendly for him.

PATHE

And here's little Pearl White getting her knees damp and spoiling her new velvet gown, just to make us sob in "Hazel Kirke." Pearl should have her cap on and her mittens and her overshoes, for the day is cold and the snow lies thick upon the ground.

PATHE

It's worth falling when you can get sympathy and attention like this.

WORLD FILM CORP.

Lost in the snow is Kitty Gordon, her famous polished shoulders for once clad in fur. The picture for which this scene was filmed was "The Crucial Test." They named it well. Trying to look soulful while your feet are getting colder and colder—well, it's a test.

Early Struggles of Motion Picture Stars

When David W. Griffith, the Brilliant Director, Was Just Beginning to Shine

By LINDA A. GRIFFITH

CAMPBELL PHOTO

LINDA A. GRIFFITH

This series of reminiscences, written by Linda A. Griffith, wife of David Wark Griffith, who produced "The Birth of a Nation," ends with this issue. It is replete with intimate secrets of many a screen star who now scintillates, but who began at $3 a day. Mrs. Griffith writes frankly of the days when $25 a week was a consideration not to be ignored in the Griffith family.

SOME of us who have been watching the motion picture game for the last eight years or so are apt to become discouraged at times and imagine things in Picture Land darker than they are. They're not really dark at all, but striding along at a wonderful gait. It is but natural always to hope the greatest things of one's children, even though at times they become unruly, and perhaps I may not look it, but I have a very motherly feeling toward the motion picture. And so I refuse to become discouraged or full of fear regarding the future.

Now, in order to realize how much has been accomplished and how far we have traveled the path of progress, it were well to look backward a few years and take stock briefly of conditions as they were, say, in 1908, which is as far back as I can go, giving my own observations. Until the late spring of 1908 neither Mr. Griffith nor I had ever seen a motion picture, and I do not even recall having heard about one. So when, eight years ago, Fate led our steps "pictureward" to the old Biograph Studio, at 11 East Fourteenth Street, we decided it was up to us to find out what we could about these queer things called "motion pictures." As we were living up on Washington Heights, we scurried about the neighborhood, looking for some place where pictures were shown. We found a theater in a store on Amsterdam Avenue and 160th Street, and there I saw my first motion picture. It was a very good one, too, a Vitagraph picture called "The Dispatch Bearer." It had been directed by the late William Rainous, and I recall Mr. Griffith saying, "I'd like to work awhile for that man, if I'm to stay in pictures, and learn something about them." A few days later, however, the Biograph people handed Mr. Griffith a story and told him to produce it in pictures. He did so and has been doing so ever since.

Speaking of the little store on Amsterdam Avenue and 160th Street brings me to my first comparison of pictures past and present—that is, in the theaters themselves and the manner of presentment. True, Keith and Proctor's Fourteenth Street, Twenty-third Street and 125th Street theaters and the old Fourteenth Street Theater gave moving picture programs; but that was in New York City only. Even in Manhattan the theaters were in stores, and a great many of them were dark, dirty and strongly reminiscent of garlic and other such refreshing odors, and you never were quite sure when the person sitting next to you would fall asleep and incline his head on your shoulder. Conditions were somewhat different in the smaller cities where "homes" obtained, for there mother, father, children, the neighbors and their pet dog left their cozy firesides, abandoned the evening's innocent game of cards, the chat over the events of the day—even forgot that the children said their evening prayers regularly at eight p. m.—and followed the crowd to the little picture house around the corner. The picture house in the smaller cities and villages was also without exception a store that happened to be vacant. Some enterprising man would rent it, sweep out the dirt, give the place a bit of dusting, put a screen at one end and a projecting machine at the other, fill the room with ordinary wooden chairs—and his theater was complete. The chief concern was to place one's self in a vacant chair and not in a spectator's lap.

The other day, while passing the Strand Theater with a friend, we stopped and looked at the photographs in frames and the large hand-colored pictures on display in the lobby. My friend confided to me that she might now be a famous motion picture star, if in former days they had advertised in that respectable way. It seems that when her opportunity came, those flaming, lurid, sensational posters that used to flutter in the breeze over a moving picture theater entrance way, and that have now almost passed into oblivion, were the only form of advertising used, and she said she looked up at them and thought, "No, I'll not work in motion pictures and have myself part of a display like that—not for a million dollars, and not if I starve to death by refusing." You couldn't blame her much. So, you see, the exhibitor has done his part, and to ask for finer moving picture theaters than we already have would be impossible.

It isn't so many years ago that the only time a bona-fide newspaper made mention of such a thing as a motion picture was when a small boy got into serious mischief, and when parents or judge in the courtroom asked him how it happened he came to do this wicked thing, he would look naively up into the eyes of whoever was reprimanding him and say, "I saw it in a motion picture," and he was immediately forgiven. And how the newspapers did love to rub it in to us! I can say in all truthfulness the newspapers never took the slightest cognizance of us at any other time excepting when a small boy got into trouble. Browning's "Pippa Passes," which was produced as a moving picture in October, 1909, brought the first criticism of a motion picture in a New York newspaper—a column article in the New York Times. To-day the newspapers give us as much space as the spoken drama and just as fair reviews.

In connection with the newspaper, I will tell a little story about the topical review. About seven years ago, at a dinner, Mr. Griffith and I had as one of our guests the editor of a New York paper. During the course of the dinner the talk drifted to pictures, and Mr. Griffith happened to say that the day wasn't so far in coming when the public would go to a theater at night and see thrown on a screen the pictured events of that day, the same as they would be recorded in an evening paper. Our guest thought that was a pretty wild flight of fancy, but just this spring I saw the preparedness parade on Fifth Avenue from a window in one of the offices of this same paper at two-thirty o'clock p. m., and at seven that same evening on the screen of a Broadway motion picture theater I saw the photographed parade.

Wonderful strides have been made in motion picture photography. One thing in the photographic line I hope many come soon, and that is color. I think the reason the costume photoplay has so little appeal is because of lack of color. I do not think a picturization even of the Holy Grail would get over in the black and white photography, but I think it would be tremendous in color.

Now we have much good direction in pictures and good acting and photography and pleasant settings, when we can enjoy the finished photoplay, set to appropriate music. I think I have been quite optimistic. But here I stop, for we haven't made the same strides in STORIES. The photoplaywright has yet to come into his own. He has yet to come into his own as far as credit for his part of the work is due him and remuneration that will stand some comparison to the salaries of directors and stars. Great stories must be written for the screen if the photoplay is to take its place as a great creative art. Adaptations of plays and books are all very well, and some of them make very good photoplays, and there is a public that likes to see the "six best sellers" on the screen, even if they nap between reels. But in my opinion the photoplay will never be truly great until we encourage men and women of brain and imagination to write original screen stories. We have made the least progress in the photoplay story. Let us work for better stories, and let us fight censorship—and the future will take care of itself.

THE END

LASKY

MARIE DORO

The Love o' the Light-man

By HARRY J. SMALLEY

Of the crush and the rush and the hum and the purr
In the big studio, I'm a part.
Ev'ry day and oft nights I toil at the lights,
O'er dancing and wooing and dangers and fights.
I know little of art,
But there's joy in my heart
When I work on a set for her!

When she comes on the scene, in my heart is a stir
That is caused by herself, nothing less!
She has smiles for us all, and some to me fall—
Those moments are precious, while waiting the call!
Oh, it's true, I confess,
I'm near heaven, I guess,
When I work on a set for her!

"All ready now? Lights! Camera! Shoot!" With a whir
Our set with activity teems,
While I love from afar, because of Fate's bar—
I'm only a light-man, and she is a star,
Quite the brightest that gleams—
And so, too, are my dreams,
When I work on a set for her!

TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

A cow isn't exactly the sort of pet you want on your front lawn, and the hired man would never have led her to the front if the director hadn't insisted.

TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

"Now, kitty," said Louise Fazenda, "don't you scratch. You sit right up and say 'please,' like a nice kitty-cat."

TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

From the expression on Gloria Swanson's face, in "Haystacks and Steeples," this perfectly good porky-pig might be a mouse. And Bobbie Vernon doesn't look as if he was much protection. He is scared to death, too.

LASKY

Fannie Ward came out fine—but the dog moved, evidently.

FOX

Naturally George Walsh is embarrassed at being the only man on the page, except Bobbie Vernon; but there are advantages in being one of two men guests at a party. But George is a shy creature, and he is liable to lead that coy-eyed mule away any minute.

VITAGRAPH

"Jackpot" is the name of Hyland's dog, and if she sits to rest a bit between scenes, is her devoted companion.

They Pick Their Pets

WHAT has become of the a poodle tucked under her l dogs are no longer the pampered and as varied pets as there are geese and cunning little porker inality when she is choosing her gent; but how many of us w once chose a wolf for a pet; but—including a few cheers. It small white hen around with h not nearly so high as they are r a fair week's salary. But the the boards when it comes to p dling, hissing geese. And tak pet, when you get used to hav course, have been considered a you have believed that a famou caress? And as for bears—w sure, so there must be more be

MUTUAL

This little piggy didn't go to market. No, sir! It is Mary Miles Minter's pet pig, and no cruel butcher will get it.

TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

Hisses rhyme with "kisses," and that is why Ora Carew says that geese are readily much more intelligent than we give them credit for.

From a Menagerie These Days

o invariably carried a small but superior And what has become of the poodle? For the screen people. They have as many amants on the screen. From tigers to dmodern screen actress evinces a lot of orig- A dog is faithful, and a horse is intelli- k on a cow for a pet? Sara Bernhardt re on this page is a girl with three tigers e famous Gaby, wasn't it? who carried a plicity and egg purposes. And eggs were n two dollars and two eggs are considered r on this page who has Gaby backed off she has three geese—three proud, wad- at the porkers. A pig is really a clever a grunting around all the time. Cats, of material for pets for years; but would lady would pick on a horse to love and of us have a den in our homes, to be ptivity than we have suspected.

A young tiger, now, is an odd compan- ion; but a basket of them ought to make the days fly quickly. Valentine Grant always picks odd pets; but a bushel of tigers to buy milk for at pre- sent high prices—whew!

PATHE

Helen Chadwick grew so fond of this horse that played in "The Challenge" that she never left the studio at night without taking a last look to see that the faithful animal was comfortable.

TRIANGLE-FINE ARTS

ar that? Julia Fay likes cats. She ys cats have so much soul and so uch mystery. Well, perhaps they do.

BALBOA

This amiable brown bear could send Little Mary Sunshine to the mat with one stroke of his clumsy paw, but he is a devoted pet.

PATHE

Marie Wayne says kissing hors- es may be all right; but while she likes her cat, still, kissing felines is apt to bring on diphtheria and other dreadful ailments. She just talks to her cat.

FOX

Would you have believed that Annette Kel- lermann ever wore a riding habit? We have seen her only in abbreviated bathing suits.

PICK YOUR FAVORITE

MUTUAL

William Kolb feels almost sure you'll pick him. He is merely waiting for the decision.

TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

Charles Murray looks queer, but this is just one of his facial expressions that gets a laugh on the screen. "Give us plenty of the funny faces," write the soldier boys from the trenches. Well, here's one of 'em.

MUTUAL

Max Dill says give him his old pipe and the evening paper and he is happy.

TRIANGLE

Arthur Shirley can look mighty dignified when he wants to. But who could smile with that stern pose across the page looking right at him?

PATHE

Well, well! Here's Harold Lloyd, who is doing a lot of good comedy in the Lonesome Luke series. Personally, we think Harold is much funnier without the mustache and the attempt to imitate any comedian but himself—but then——

FOX

William Taylor seems to be thinking what he'll order for dinner. Roast? No. Chop? No. A nice steak, medium? Yes!

FOX

George Walsh is a temperamental lad, judging from that nonchalant hair and the soulful eyes of him.

McCLURE PICTURES

A nice, comfortable, steady sort of a face, Holbrook Blinn has.

HOW ABOUT THESE?

SELZNICK

Some people are born with a droop to the right eye, others acquire it later on. We leave it to you to decide in what class Norma Talmadge belongs—we've given it up. But it's a very fascinating droop, for all that, and when the effect is completed by a large white picture hat above and a magnificent ermine scarf below—well, just look steadily at this picture for a while, and see how long it will be before you feel a funny little droop in your own eye.

VITAGRAPH

"That was a funny one," says Dorothy Kelly. "Tell me another." Everything looks bright to Dorothy; but why not? With youth, beauty, wealth and unbounded admiration—gracious, that girl ought to look happy!

WITZEL

Dorothy Love Clark's folks say there never was so restless a baby as Dorothy. Even when she was a very tiny tot, she was dancing all over the house, and she's been dancing her way to fame and fortune ever since. Light as this-tledown is Dorothy—and if you think this is an easy stunt to do, just try it in front of your mirror before going to bed to-night.

MCCLURE PICTURES

Here's Ann Murdock in the latest thing in boudoir costumes—nifty knickers, they're called, and all the studio folk are wearing 'em. "You can't see any knickers," you say? They're there, just the same—black satin ones that cut off right below the knee. Miss Murdock is starring in "Envy," one of the Seven Deadly Sins Series filmed by McClure Pictures. Though what anyone so young and pretty and successful has to be envious about is more than we can fathom.

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Making up is easy enough, but taking it off the cheeks and eyes is what takes time and cold cream. It takes so much of Irene Fenwick's time to make up that she won't quarrel.

ARTCRAFT

"I'm a believer in peace at any price," says Mary Pickford. "Now, then, Spot, keep still and shake hands with his duckship." Still, somehow, this doesn't look like Mary.

HELEN AT HER HAZARDING

KALEM

"Hist! I have you in me power!" drawls the villain (he's there, even though you can't see him). "Not yet!" proudly returns Helen Gibson, and as the train thunders by, she calmly bends back her hand, and zip! goes the rope.

KALEM

There isn't a train going can keep Helen off it.

KALEM

"Oh, bless these roomy skirts", breathes Helen, "I couldn't have done this a few years ago."

KALEM

With the villain's grasping hands almost upon her, our heroine clutches the railing of the train and swings over into safety.

KALEM

Its fierce! All a poor star can do is grit her teeth and trust that everything will happen according to schedule.

When Movie-actor-itis Breaks Out

By One of 'Em

MOVIE-ACTOR-ITIS breaks out like a rash.

In fact, it is the rashest of all rash diseases—and desires.

Movie-actor-itis is a terrible state to be in, and being a state, can be “bounded” as in geography.

It is bounded on the north by a great yearning to see yourself cavorting on the screen.

It is bounded on the south by a throbbing desire to draw down a movie actor's salary of one hundred dollars an hour which every actor gets—in the press notices.

It is bounded on the east by a secret and constant and blushing wish to hug and kiss all the pretty movie actresses—unless you are a girl. Then the secret throb of your tender heart is to be kissed by the manly and curly-haired movie-actor hero.

It is bounded on the west by a large gob of wishes to the effect that you could just get into the game a few days, if only to show some people who have been at it for ten years what simps they are and how they should really act.

First, you attend the movies. You laugh at the rube sheriff, and you weep when the poor, unfortunate girl is deceived by the base shoe clerk into believing the honest young hero is in love with the adventuress in the awning-striped dress.

The next night you go and clinch your fist angrily—it doesn't matter which fist; this depends on which hand your companion is holding at the time—when you see the cruel uncle force his ward to marry the wicked slob of a count.

On the third night you sigh pensively when the heroine sits in her boudoir and has her raven tresses dressed by a chic maid, or when the handsome hero has his valet bring him a whole cigarette and the morning paper.

On the fourth night it occurs to you that you could do better than any of them!

On the fifth night you sorter wish you could have taken the part of Reginald or Muriel in the photoplay, because you know you could have done it better.

On the sixth night you go home and toss about, and get up and pose before the mirror, and go to bed again and dream and dream and dream.

And on the seventh night you eat baked beans and fish balls and frankfurters for tea, and kid yourself into the belief that the funny feeling you have is pure temperament! You realize now that you should have been a movie actor, and you begin to figure out how you can prevent the great army of producers from tearing each other limb from limb when you announce that you are about to become a movie actor and can give your services to only one concern.

Now you have movie-actor-itis!
You want to become a movie actor, and, by gracious!—or heck! depending on the sex—you are going to be one. Of course, all the professionals will weep and tear their hair and curse—you don't know that cursing above sotto-voce is forbidden in the business—when they learn your intentions.

All this is from my own experiences. One sweet, charming young lady came to me and said, “Oh, Mr. Flicker—I don't know your real name”——

“That's my reel name. Shoot,” I replied; but she didn't have a gun.

“Oh, Mr. Flicker, I just simply know I could be as funny as you are on the screen, if I only got a chance!”

“You'd be funnier in my—er—shoes,” I assured her.

“All my friends say I am so funny”——

“Your friends are quick to size up funny things,” I told her.

“I am going to call myself ‘Clarice Flicker,’ and”——

But I beat it. I didn't know whether it was a compliment or a proposal—which is quite the reverse. She had one form of movie-actor-itis.

I never saw a pale, anemic, knock-kneed young book-keeper but what longed to become a film hero—longed and yearned to throttle the life out of Bill the Bite with his own bare hands, or leap fearlessly over a hundred-foot cliff into the raging rapids, or swim three miles across a surging river just to keep a date with Kit, the trapper's daughter. Or else he yearned to mount a bucking bronco and dash fearlessly fifty miles across the torrid desert and rescue the heroine from a band of Indians.

And I have met scores and oddles—anyway, I've met bushels of pale, skinny, squint-eyed, scraggly-haired, gum-chewing girls, whose little hearts just ached to become the tall and voluptuous and queenly and ravishingly beautiful princess in the movies, who spurns the dissipated prince and married the young chauffeur, only to learn, after all, that he is a changeling and the real prince; or else she longs to leap from a burning building, or shoot the wicked burglar, sitting in bed all dolled up.

They've got it, the poor dears! they've got movie-actor-itis.

“But,” so many have said to me, “what shall we do when we have this thing you call ‘movie-actor-itis’—when we yearn and yearn and long to pose for the moving picture camera?”

And then I tell them.

Were you ever a child? A youngster? A kid? And did you ever hear the advice about the rain? “It is raining,” someone states. “What shall I do?” And the village cut-up always replies, “Let it rain.”

Just so with movie-actor-itis. Go ahead and yearn.

In Search of Types

By ESTHER LINDNER

ALL THE motion picture world is "type" crazy. On almost every street there resides some impressionable young miss, trying to out-sweeten Blanche Sweet or wiggle her eyebrows like Marguerite Clark, merely because some well-intentioned friends have informed her that she is the Sweet or Clark "type"; and as for the Douglas Fairbankses and Jack Barrymores—they can't be counted.

So that I was not surprised when, one morning, I was told to interview the casting directors of some of the studios on "picking types." Notwithstanding the fact that I had been told that interviewing was a tedious task, it seemed to me that all one would have to do would be to go in and talk, and then get out again, and that was all there would be to it.

I landed first at the Selznick Studio, at East 176th Street, where I asked to see the casting director. With a lordly gesture a very officious young man motioned me to a seat. He was twirling a policeman's club at the time, which he informed me was to "keep people from getting fresh." All about me were men and women of the "profession," boosting their own reputations with one breath, only to knock their sisters and brothers in art with the next. From time to time one or another of them would take from some hidden recesses bits of film—miniatures of themselves—hold them up to the light and expatiate upon how wonderful Director So-and-so thought them in that role. It was amusing, but as they were all there because they were out of work, it was pathetic as well.

After a few preliminaries I was admitted to the office of Mr. Morhange, who shares, with Albert Capellani, the distinction of being general director of the Selznick forces. To him I made known my wants.

"I know that everyone is talking 'types,'" said Mr. Morhange; "but it is all greatly exaggerated. Of course we are always on the lookout for types, but we consider it of much more importance to have people who can act a part, even though they are not of the exact type required, and make them up to resemble it as closely as possible. Occasionally we do pick up absolutely inexperienced people, just because they happen to be an unusual type.

"The hardest types of all to get are the men. There are many types of women—the ingenue, the mother, the vampire. We can usually find someone for every part. But men are different. What we do in those cases is to get men who are good actors and make them up to the type. Sometimes, however, this is difficult. For instance, if we must have a butler in a picture, it is much better to take a man who has really been a butler than one who has been a gentleman—comparatively—all his life and whose idea of portraying a butler is to wear 'sideboards' and stick his elbows out in front of him. We have men in our studio who play only butler roles. They get big money for it, too."

"Well," thought I, "that was easy." Guess I'll go over to Fort Lee and finish 'em all up to-day."

It was then quarter of one. By quarter to two I was at the Universal Studio in Fort Lee, asking to see a casting director. Here, too, I was lucky, for I had no difficulty at all in gaining access to Mr. Brownell, and to him, too, I told my story. "I'm from FILM FUN," said I, "and I'm trying to get a story on picking types."

"What kind of a story?" he wanted to know.

"Oh, how you do it, and what happens, and if it's difficult—the usual line, you know."

"It is very difficult," said Mr. Brownell, "and the director is often fooled. For instance, one day a beautifully dressed, well-groomed and well-mannered young man came in to me. He said that he had a great deal of experience, had played with Mary Pickford and Famous Players, and would like to try Universal for a while, if we had a part to give him. He seemed in every way to be an ideal 'type' for a part I had in mind. I took him to one of the directors, who cast him at once as a 'heavy' in a picture we were then filming. And when he got in front of the camera, we found that he didn't even know how to hold a girl's hand! That's one way of picking. Another way is to go upon well-known reputations. We know that a certain actor can play a part, and we keep after him until we get him. People come in with all sorts of stories, but I have found that it is more often the men who attempt to lie and 'bluff' than Norma Talmadge in a teary type. Every girl who sees this will practice crying before her mirror at once.

Albert Capellani was too busy to talk types. He was in the studio, chuckling over the antics of Edward Kimball dressed as a negro mammy.

the women. An inexperienced person, however good a type, is never cast for large parts. He is usually started in mob scenes and trained until he can be given small parts, and so on until he becomes well known. It is much better to have experienced men and women who can act than unusual 'types' who cannot. The most difficult type of all to find is the male 'juvenile.' Lots of very good types come to the studio, but they cannot act and are fit only for mob scenes. Here are some of them," and he drew out a drawer crammed full of photographs. "These people are all excellent types, but they can't act and probably never will be able to. So, you see, we directors do have our troubles."

Having thanked Mr. Brownell, I wandered off down the street to the Paragon Studio, where Mary Pickford's pictures are filmed.

"Who's your casting director here?" I asked the girl in charge.

"We have no casting director," said she.

"Well," I wanted to know, "to whom am I going to talk? Isn't there any director here?"

"There's only one," she answered, "and you can't see him. You leave your photograph, and if the director likes it, he'll send for you."

"Gosh!" I said, "I don't want to be a movie actress. I'm from a magazine, and I've got to interview somebody."

"Oh!" she said, "that's different. Mr. Tourneur's on the floor just now, but you can sit down and wait for him."

People wandered in, looked at me queerly, and wandered out again. In the studio, which I could see from where I was sitting, something seemed to be going on; but I did not dare to go in and find out, for just ahead of me was an enormous card, bearing in large, very black type this legend:

"Stop! Do not go into this studio without permission! If you do, you will be ordered out."

Now, I defy anyone to say I haven't the requisite amount of nerve for the average person, but—well, you can see for yourself that was forbidding.

"I'll be back later to see Mr. Tourneur," I told the girl at the desk, and clutching my storm coat—it had been cold crossing the ferry—I hurried down the street to the Fox Studio. Studio builders, I find, have a queer habit of hiding their doors, or else of putting in three or four of them, just for the fun of telling you to go round to another one. At last, after circling the entire building several times, I did succeed in locating the door intended for use and charged boldly up the steps. And there, stuck in the glass, was a card reading thus:

"Keep out—this means you! Positively no casting done here. See me at my New York office, 126 West Forty-sixth Street. M. Kingston."

With a sigh I hustled down the steps and to the street. The friendly conductor on the trolley car had told me that I should also find the Eclair Studio in the same row. I did, but going up to it, I found also that owing to a fire the Eclair had been merged into the World Peerless, "just around the corner." In the hall crowds of people were standing around, and many men and women in make-up were waiting apparently to be called for a scene. I had never seen them made up before. It fascinated me, but as it was getting late, I marched up to the man at the desk and asked to see the casting director.

"There isn't any. Every director does his own casting, and you can't see him," said that authority paradoxically. But by that time I had learned that the doormen must be humored.

"Listen," I said. "I'm not looking for a job. Just tell your director that I'm from FILM FUN, and that I want to talk to him. I think he'll see me."

It is much better to have experienced types who can act as well as photograph well—Vivian Martin, for instance.

Mr. Tourneur was gone, but Mary Pickford was intently studying the camera. Probably looking for the pretty bird.

"I'll tell Mr. Burkart," he relented; "but you'll have to wait." So I sat down once more, while up and down the stairs trooped "butchers and bakers and candlestick-makers." There was Muriel Ostriche in a fluffy pink ballet costume, Alice Brady in a red one, and Carlyle Blackwell, screen idol supreme, standing around, talking just like regular persons; and children—lots of them—the most self-possessed youngsters I had ever seen.

Meanwhile I speedily discovered who Mr. Burkart was. But after he had passed and repassed me several times, my patience was exhausted, and I looked around for my doorman. In the pastime of hugging promiscuously most of the girls who were standing in the corridor, he had quite forgotten me. It seemed to me to be about time for me to take matters into my own hands. The next time the director passed me, I stood up right in front of him.

"Can I talk to you for five minutes?" I asked him.

"Yes," he answered. "Come in here." And the expression on that doorman's face as I was led into an inner office more than repaid me for my waiting.

"All that is required for picking types is a little common sense," began Mr. Burkart, after I had told him what I wanted. "A director must be able to look over the men and women who apply to him for parts and be able to tell just how they will look and photograph when made up. The picking of types depends absolutely upon the director. Some directors prefer to get a good type, regardless of how much or how little experience goes with it. 'Leave the acting to me,' they say. 'We want the type.' Others prefer to use an experienced person made up to represent the required type. Once in a while we do find an unusual type with ability to act as well. A director must be able to see possibilities in his subject. For example, a little girl once came to me for a part. I considered her unusual, but could find no one to agree with me. I took her before a big star and a score of directors. No one could see her. 'Wait,' said I. 'Watch her grow.' To-day that girl is at the head of her own feature company—she's great! Lots of people try to bluff, but unless a director is absolutely green, he catches right on."

Here Mr. Burkart lapsed into silence and looked at his watch. I hurriedly started the ball rolling once more.

"Er—er—what do you consider the hardest type to get?" I asked, taking a long chance on an old standby.

"The hardest type to get," said Mr. Burkart, "is the blond juvenile—both male and female. Scores of them come in, good looking, well dressed, wearing their clothes well; but when we get them in front of the camera, they photograph badly."

And at this point, just as I was letting a long sigh of relief escape me, the 'phone bell rang. It was provoking! Mr. Burkart answered it, spoke for a few minutes, slammed down the receiver, snatched some papers from his desk and rushed out of the room. "You'll have to excuse me," he called back over his shoulder.

Of course I saw that I would, but decided to wait, when my old friend, the doorman, poked his head in at the door. "Going to keep this office all night?" he wanted to know.

That was my walking cue, I realized, but I was not going to be shoved out thus unceremoniously.

"No," I said politely. Almost immediately Mr. Burkart hustled back. He seemed surprised at finding me still there, but summoning all my dignity, I rose, uttered a "Thank you for seeing me," and walked out, nodding at the doorman as I passed him.

"Can I see Mr. Tourneur now?" I asked the girl at Paragon.

She was completely surrounded by chauffeurs, but she gave me her attention long enough to tell me that he was still busy. Back I went to my old chair. In the studio the same noises were going on, the same people passing in and out. Stopping a man who happened to pass at that moment, I asked to see Mr. Tourneur.

"Mr. Tourneur isn't here," he told me.

The Fox types are so temperamental that they require music during rehearsal.

"Not here?" I gasped "Why, the girl told me to wait."

"Well, he's not here," he repeated. "Here's the man you want to see—Mr. Smith."

A man whom I had seen often that afternoon lounged over.

"I want to see Mr. Tourneur," I told him, "but if I can't talk to him, I must talk to some director. Are you a director?"

"I'm here with a director," said Mr. Smith non-committally. "But it's another company. Mary Pickford's company isn't here at all this week. Famous Players is using the studio in their absence."

"Then I'll talk to Famous Players," said I. "I was going down to the New York studio in the morning, anyway. Now can you tell me"—and I was off again on the old line.

"I don't go in for publicity," was Mr. Smith's modest answer. "You just go down to New York and ask for Mr. Kaufman. He likes that sort of thing."

"All right," said I. "I'm glad I spoke to you, anyway. I'd have waited here all night for Mr. Tourneur."

"Yes," he answered. "I wouldn't wait around here any longer if I were you."

Now somebody was fibbing, but whether it was the girl at the desk or Mr. Smith, I couldn't decide.

The following morning, at nine-thirty, I called at the Famous Players New York studio and asked to see Mr. Kaufman.

"Mr. Kaufman is busy," said the doorman there. "You can see a director only between nine-thirty and ten o'clock, and we've engaged everyone for to-day."

Here it was again. I patiently explained that, unusual as it might seem to him in a female of the species, I had absolutely no desire to woo Fame as a motion picture actress, that it was then one minute past nine-thirty, and that I had come from a magazine to talk to Mr. Kaufman. After that I was politely told to "Follow me," and led through to an office directly behind the outer waiting-room. There I was given into the charge of Miss Rose, Mr. Kaufman's secretary.

"It's too bad you weren't here earlier to watch me picking out angels," said Miss Rose. "If you could sit here with me for one day, you'd know more about picking types than Mr. Kaufman could tell you in a week. However, I'll tell him you're here; but he's busy now, so I'm afraid you'll have to wait."

I was used to that, so I seated myself in a comfortable easy chair. After a little while a young man bustled in, looked at me and went through to a room still further back. Then Miss Rose went in to announce me, and after about two minutes someone called out, "Tell the lady to come in."

"I guess that's me," I said—in moments like these, what does a little grammar matter?—and in I went.

"The question of types is a very difficult one to discuss offhand," began Mr. Kaufman. "We prefer to use them 'straight'—as near the type as possible. The hardest part we ever had to cast was the Queen Mother in 'Snow White,' for the woman who played that part had really to portray four roles instead of one. In the beginning of the story she is very ugly, you remember. She then goes to a witch, who transforms her into the very beautiful woman whom the king marries. So we had to have a beautiful woman with a good form, who would really look like a queen in court robes. But later she has herself transformed into the old apple woman who tries to poison Snow White, and later still she plays the part of the beggar woman with the poisoned comb. We hunted high and low for a woman who could do all this and look the parts as well, and finally, just by chance, the exact type we wanted walked in here. That was Dorothy Cummings. She had a great deal of stage experience, but had never before registered with us.

"No inexperienced girl can be given large parts. Sometimes we have girls come in who would, I know, be wonderful. But their names have no box-office value, and the theaters that pay big money for our service will not take them. What we do is to give girls like these small parts, until they become better known. But this is difficult, for it is usually the little girls who make the successes, and it is hard to cast them. For in a picture like one of Marguerite Clark's, we surround her with a notable cast, but we must see to it that there is no other little girl like her. She is the little girl in that picture."

We were getting on beautifully—when in came Miss Rose, with the announcement that someone was waiting outside to see Mr. Kaufman.

"You'll have to excuse me one minute," said the latter. "I'll be right back." But my heart sank. It had been my experience that, once they got away, they never came back. And I was right. For five minutes later he poked his head in at the door. "There are several companies waiting for me. I'm afraid I'll have to go," he told me. "Come back late some afternoon, say about four or five o'clock, and call me up personally before you come, won't you?"

I said that I would, but in my heart I knew that I would not. I was through with interviewing and sick to death of "types," and—thank heaven, that's over!

VITAGRAPH

Bobbie Connelly reads about the Allies—but you will notice the soldiers are German.

What's the Matter with the Motion Picture Business?

IT LOOKS to me as if the picture business ought to look up some, now that President Wilson has taken to going to see the motion pictures. It shows judgment in the President. And I understand William Fox wants to build a monument to the Tenth Muse, which he calls "Cinema." It isn't a bad idea. Terry Ramsey wants to give them a new title, called "Pix," which is a bad idea—so there you are.

As to the spread of the pictures, there is scarcely a country you can mention where motion pictures have not arrived. They have really beaten the Gospels in getting spread. The consuls in foreign countries are putting them in their reports now. According to consuls' reports, over in Darien, Manchuria, the people are crazy over pictures. The South Manchuria Railway runs one of the three theaters in the province, and they are usually packed when a performance is on. The British government sends a sort of traveling motion picture equipment through India, allowing it to stay in each village from three days to a week. The natives throng to the village for miles for this entertainment and break into roars of laughter over the American comedies. They cannot always understand the titles, but they get the humor of the picture—which is a triumph for the people who believe that a real motion picture does not need a sub-title.

In Havre, for instance, where the audiences rise and sing the national airs of the Allies before each performance, the tobacco shops give coupons with each purchase of tobacco, which are accepted at the motion picture theaters as half the price of admission. In Yokohama, Japan, the picture theaters are crowded every day and every night. They demand two- and three-reel dramas and one-reel comedies. They are strong on comedies. They like American slapstick and are sending over their own Japan students to learn all about the motion picture business, in order that they may return and make Japan pictures with Japan titles.

The Swiss want thrillers. They clamor for detective and "Injun" stories and wildly applaud the Wild West pictures of America, and fondly believe that Chicago, Denver and Kansas City are surrounded by dense forests, wherein Indians lurk and buffalo and mountain lions play tag with each other. In Valencia, Spain, the picture fans can rent an entire box, holding five people, for an afternoon for forty cents, and remain for three delightful hours, seeing America first.

The pictures have done something else than girdle the globe, near as I can make out. I dropped into my club the other day and fell into conversation with an old and valued friend, who was musing on the progress of the picture business. He told me, with some awe in his voice, that he had just met a young man on the street, who had informed him that he was prospering in the motion picture business—in the financial end.

"By George!" said my friend, "only six years ago that chap was my office boy. I believe he got something like six dollars a week. Now he is drawing seventy, he tells me. Very nearly what I get myself, as a result of long and painstaking years at my chosen vocation. It has taken me years of work and study to climb to that salary. He jumped at his in less than a year. Wonderful what money they spend in the motion picture business—for inexperience."

It isn't inexperience; it's bluff. The shifting of the sands is caused by personal ambition. Every time a new company or a new magazine is formed, there is a surge of talent that way. Trouble is that everyone in the picture business, no matter what department he may be in, thinks he is a genius. He knows that his genius is not appreciated. When the new company graciously makes room for his services, he feels that at last his chance to make his talents known in the motion picture business has arrived. And he joins the new organization and pits his inexperienced genius against the stern wall of reality that confronts him. He soon finds that they do not appreciate his genius any more in the new job than they did in the old. He bluffs his way to another job, and so on, until he wakes up to the fact that the motion picture industry, like every other industry, can use best the same old plodding business virtues that plow a furrow to success in any line in which they may be employed. Too much genius and too little experience—that's what's the matter with the motion picture business.

Blame It on the Pictures

"Hit wus de love of dress of mah wife dat brung me to dis co't of jestic," complained the old negro who had been arrested for chicken stealing. "Hit wus mah wife, suh, and she git hit fum dem movin' pitchures."

"Why was it your wife's fault?" queried the judge. "You admit you took the chicken."

"Yas, suh; yas, suh," admitted the negro. "But mah wife wusn't satisfied to cook 'n' eat dat chicken; she had to put de feathers in her hat and parade de evidence, suh."

He Is Discouraged

WALTER PRICHARD EATON has taken a whack at the motion picture folks. He says the screen has nothing to offer, anyhow, that the stage cannot do much better. Added to that sting, he goes on to say that most of the screen stories are written over Sunday and are stereotyped.

After a while, when they begin to accept Walter's scenarios, he will feel more cheerful about it. They always write that way, at first, till they get going. Fortunately, the scenarios are not written for the dramatic critics.

Why Live An Inferior Life?

I know that I can easily, quickly and positively prove to you that you are only half as alive as you must be to realize the joys and benefits of living in full; and that you are only half as well as you should be, half as vigorous as you can be, half as ambitious as you may be, and only half as well developed as you ought to be.

THE fact is that no matter who you are, whether you are young or old, weak or strong, rich or poor, I can prove to you readily by demonstration that you are leading an inferior life, and I want the opportunity to show you the way in which you may completely and easily, without inconvenience or loss of time, come in possession of new life, vigor, energy, development and a higher realization of life and success.

Become Superior to Other Men

The Swoboda System can make a better human being of you physically, mentally and in every way. The Swoboda System can do more for you than you can imagine. It can so vitalize every organ, tissue and cell of your body as to make the mere act of living a joy. It can give you an intense, thrilling and pulsating nature. It can increase your very life. I not only promise it, I guarantee it. My guarantee is unusual, startling, specific, positive and absolutely fraud proof.

Why Take Less Than Your Full Share of Life and Pleasure?

Are you living a full and successful life? Why not always be at your best—thoroughly well, virile, energetic? Why not invest in yourself and make the most of your every opportunity? It is easy when you know how. The Swoboda System points the way. It requires no drugs, no appliances, no dieting, no study; no loss of time, no special bathing; there is nothing to worry you. It gives ideal mental and physical conditions without inconvenience or trouble.

Your Earning Power

—your success, depend entirely upon your energy, health, vitality, memory and will power. Without these, all knowledge becomes of small value, for it cannot be put into active use. The Swoboda System can make you tireless, improve your memory, intensify your will power, and make you physically just as you ought to be.

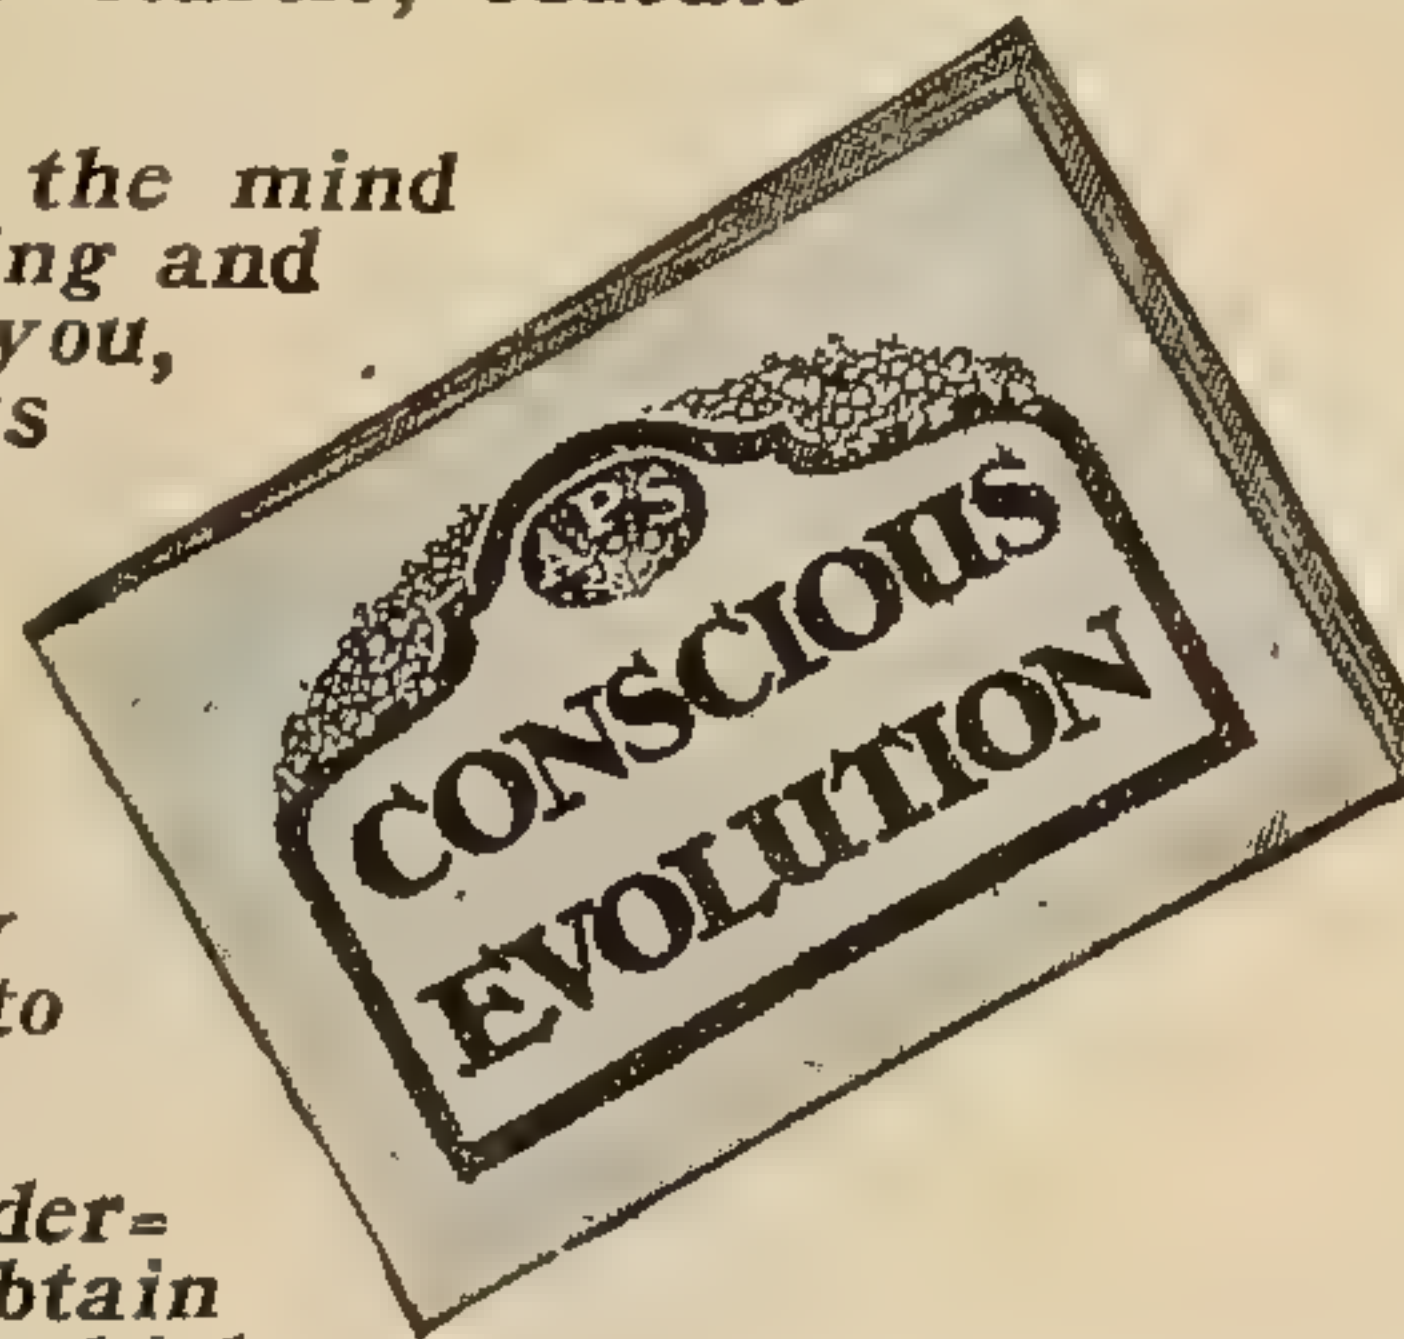

My New Copyrighted Book is Free

It explains the SWOBODA SYSTEM OF CONSCIOUS EVOLUTION and the human body as it has never been explained before. It will startle, educate and enlighten you.

My book explains my new theory of the mind and body. It tells, in a highly interesting and simple manner, just what, no doubt, you, as an intelligent being, have always wanted to know about yourself.

You will cherish this book for having given you the first real understanding of your body and mind. It shows how you may be able to obtain a superior life; it explains how you may make use of natural laws to your own advantage.

My book will give you a better understanding of yourself than you could obtain from a college course. The information which it imparts cannot be obtained elsewhere at any price. It shows the unlimited possibilities for you through conscious evolution of your cells; it explains my discoveries and what they are doing for men and women. Thousands have advanced themselves in every way through a better realization and conscious use of the principles which I have discovered and which I disclose with my book. It also explains the dangers and after-effects of exercise and excessively deep breathing.

Mail the Coupon Today

Write today for my Free Book and full particulars before it slips your mind.

You owe it to yourself at least to learn the full facts concerning the Swoboda System of conscious evolution for men and women. Mail the coupon or a post card now, before you forget.

ALOIS P. SWOBODA
1993 Aeolian Building New York City

CREATOR OF CONSCIOUS EVOLUTION

Swoboda

What Others Have to Say

"Worth more than a thousand dollars to me in increased mental and physical capacity."

"I was very skeptical, now am pleased with results; have gained 17 pounds."

"The very first lesson began to work magic. In my gratitude, I am telling my croaking and complaining friends, 'Try Swoboda'."

"Words cannot explain the new life it imparts to both body and brain."

"It reduced my weight 29 pounds, increased my chest expansion 5 inches, reduced my waist 6 inches."

"My reserve force makes me feel that nothing is impossible, my capacity both physically and mentally is increasing daily."

"I think your system is wonderful. I thought I was in the best physical health before I wrote for your course, but I can now note the greatest improvement even in this short time. I cannot recommend your system too highly. Do not hesitate to refer to me."

"You know more about the human body than any man with whom I have ever come in contact personally or otherwise."

A FEW OF SWOBODA'S PROMINENT PUPILS

F. W. Vanderbilt
Alfred I. Du Pont
Simon Guggenheim
W. G. Rockefeller, Jr.
Charles Evans Hughes
Frank A. Vanderlip
W. R. Hearst
Charles F. Swift
Woodrow Wilson
Howard Gould
Oscar Strauss

A. W. Armour
Maxine Elliott
Anna Held

Alois P. Swoboda
1993 Aeolian Building
New York City

Please send me your free copyrighted book, "Conscious Evolution."

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

The Swoboda System is as Effective for Women as for Men

The Santa Fe SHATTERS WATCH PRICES SEE THIS WATCH FIRST

Don't Send a Penny Examine Watch Free

21 JEWEL $3.50
"Santa Fe Special" A MONTH

The REAL triumph of watch manufacturing. Sent without one Penny down. Wear it 30 days FREE.

Write for FREE Watch Book Today—shows newest watch case designs in 4 colors. READ the so-called SECRETS of watch making. READ how you can save from ONE-THIRD to ONE-HALF of your money—Buy "Direct," cut out the wholesale jeweler's profit.

Buy The BEST RAILROAD Watch—The Famous "Santa Fe Special"

—the one watch "That's Guaranteed for Life," thin model, all sizes, adjusted to positions, adjusted to isochronism, adjusted to temperature, adjusted to the second.

EASY PAYMENTS TO SUIT YOU—Write today—your name on a postal brings the FREE watch book.

SANTA FE WATCH CO., Dept. 255, Topeka, Kan.

"Motion Picture Acting"

Will not only help you decide whether you are adapted for this profession, but will prepare you at home to face the greatest test of all—securing a position. Don't throw your chance away. Send for this book. Let us help you decide. Let us tell you first—What the Director's Photo Test Is—How to Prepare for This at Home—Whether You Are Fitted for Comedy or Drama—How the Director Works—Whom to Apply to for a Position—Where the Studios Are Located—What Personal Magnetism Is—Salary—Make Up—and a great many other important facts that are absolutely necessary for you to know.

Don't Trust to Luck

Looking for a position. The stakes are too big. Be sure you are right—then go ahead. Directors are constantly looking for Types. You may be the one to have the personality, the ability to make good.

I am offering for a short time—to readers of this magazine—"Motion Picture Acting" for only fifty cents a copy. Enclose either stamps or money in an envelope with your name and address. My book will be promptly mailed and your money promptly returned if you are not satisfied. I guarantee this to you and to "Motion Picture Classic."

H. E. GRIFFIN, Dept. F., 353 E. 55th Place, Chicago, Ill.

Voice Thrower

Learn to throw your voice into a trunk, under the bed, out in the hall or anywhere. Lots of FUN fooling the Teacher, the Janitor, Policeman, or Friends.

The Ventrilo

is a little instrument that fits into the mouth out of sight. Boys or Girls can use it. NEVER FAILS! A 32 page book on Ventriloquism sent with the VENTRILLO for 10c

Royal Novelty Co. 10c
Dept. 45 SO. NORWALK, CONN.

You Can Have Beautiful Eyebrows and Lashes

by applying "Lash-Brow-ine" nightly. It nourishes the eyebrows and lashes, making them long, thick and luxuriant, adding wonderfully to your beauty, charm and attractiveness. "Lash-Brow-ine" is a guaranteed pure and harmless preparation, used successfully by thousands. Send 25c (coin) and we will mail you "Lash-Brow-ine" and our beauty booklet prepaid in plain sealed cover.

MAYBELL LABORATORIES, 4008-18 Indiana Ave., CHICAGO

The Girl on the Cover is Dale Fuller, a Triangle Favorite.

OUR READERS' COLUMN

This department belongs to the readers of FILM FUN. Write us and tell us what you think about it. If we can help you, write and tell us so. If you like our magazine, tell us about it. If you do not like it, tell us anyway. We want to know just what you think about it.

Dear Editor—I want to tell you how much we like the girl on the cover in your January number, Veta Searle. We have been constant readers of FILM FUN for some time. We consider your editorials very instructive. You certainly are trying to uplift the silent drama. E. G., New York.

Dear Editor—We like FILM FUN better than any motion picture magazine we see, but we liked the big, laughing head covers better than the pretty girls. We girls have our favorites among the heroes of the screen, and we would like to see them on your cover. Bashful, Norfolk, Neb.

Let us know who your favorites are, and perhaps we might consider putting one or two of them on the cover.

Dear Editor—I have read somewhere of some actress who is making a collection of dolls. Can you send me her name and address? You will greatly oblige an interested reader of FILM FUN, who desires to add to the collection of dolls. An Interested Reader, San Francisco.

The fad of doll collecting is one that several actresses have acquired. All who like dolls please speak up for our San Francisco admirer.

Dear Editor—We read your magazine regularly and depend upon it for information about clean pictures. We would like to get some good, instructive films to use in church and school entertainments. Will you please tell us what would be suitable, where to get them, and about what they will cost us? P. G., South Carolina.

We have forwarded to you a complete list of excellent pictures suitable for school and churches. A price list accompanies them.

Dear Editor—What is the best place for an aspirant for screen honors to consider as a home—New York or Los Angeles? I want to be right on the spot where there are good chances for employment. Aspirant.

New York is running Los Angeles a

One of the "Men Who Are Making America"

ANDREW CARNEGIE

Big Businessmen

started reading the "Men Who Are Making America," now running in Leslie's, because it was being written by B. C. FORBES, the country's leading industrial and financial writer.

Big and little businessmen and the rest of the country, too, are reading it now, because they realize that it is the greatest history of modern American enterprise ever compiled.

A five dollar bill brings Leslie's for a year. Back numbers containing the Forbes articles that have already appeared will be furnished at ten cents each while they last.

Leslie's
Illustrated Weekly Newspaper
Established in 1855

225 Fifth Avenue, New York City

hard race as a central producing point. Many studios are located at Jacksonville, Fla., because of the climatic advantages there, and Chicago is not to be forgotten when you are selecting a point from which to search for screen fame.

Dear Editor—I am a reader of FILM FUN and enjoy it very much. I am anxious to have a picture of Thomas Chatterton, whom we enjoy seeing on the screen. Please tell me where I can get a picture of him and of Crane Wilbur and Juanita Hansen. We have just received our January number and are immensely pleased with it. Z. L., Roseburg, Oregon.

You can doubtless get a picture of Thomas Chatterton by applying to the American Film Company, Santa Barbara, Cal., and sending twenty-five cents in stamps for same. The screen stars would like to send out their pictures freely to their admirers, but with the photographic studios charging from fifteen to forty dollars a dozen, what can they do, poor things? It would take all their salary to buy pictures. You can reach Crane Wilbur at Horsley Studio, Los Angeles, Cal., and Miss Hansen at Fox Studio, Los Angeles.

Dear Editor—We are glad to note that you are not afraid to print the exact conditions of some of the motion picture studios. While many of them conscientiously endeavor to protect the young women, so far as they can, who seek employment there, we who have encountered the dreadful conditions attendant upon some of the others are glad that some magazine has the courage to print the truth regarding them. Please remember that we stand ready to assist you in any way. Disillusionized, N. Y.

Yours is only one of many letters received since our announcement that we were to print the plain truth about motion pictures in our series of articles, "The Confessions of a Motion Picture Actress." Club women who are interested in seeing clean pictures and better conditions in the studios have congratulated us, and the better class of the motion picture producers, actors and all connected with the business declare the same intention to stand behind this movement of FILM FUN to clean up the motion picture field, as far as is possible.

Nuxated Iron to Make New Age of Beautiful Women and Vigorous Iron Men

Say Physicians—Quickly Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Most Astonishing Youthful Power Into the Veins of Men—It Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Delicate, Nervous "Run Down" Folks 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time.

A Wonderful Discovery Which Promises to Mark a New Era in Medical Science

SINCE the remarkable discovery of organic iron, Nuxated Iron or "Fer Nuxate," as the French call it, has taken the country by storm. It is conservatively estimated that over three million persons annually are taking it in this country alone. Most astonishing results are reported from its use by both physicians and laymen. So much so that doctors predict that we shall soon have a new age of far more beautiful, rosy-cheeked women and vigorous iron men.

Dr. King, a New York physician and author, when interviewed on the subject, said: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor means anemia. Anemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anemic men and women is pale. The flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone; the brain fags and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Sauer, who has studied abroad in great European medical institutions, said: "As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by a lack of iron in the blood.

"Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—Nuxated Iron had filled him with renewed life. At thirty he was in bad health; at forty-six he was care worn and nearly all in. Now at fifty, after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jacques, another New York physician, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent. or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed by all good druggists.

America's cleverest humorists and America's best Illustrators have chosen Judge as the "happy medium" of expression for their most interesting contributions.

No wonder Judge is so widely quoted at home and abroad by exchange editors who clip the best there is in representative American humor.

You probably see Judge in your club, library, or reading room, but does your wife see it too?

You'll find the "happy medium" is the best kind of a week-end visitor to take home if you want to please the whole family.

One dollar puts Judge on trial for three months. If you try it that long we know you will want it as a regular visitor. $5 for a year.

Judge

The Happy Medium

JUDGE

225 Fifth Avenue, New York

F. F.-2-17

Enclosed find ($5.00) or ($1.00) for which please send me JUDGE for (1 year) (3 months).

Name

Address

Who's Who and Where

"My saddest experience," relates Charles Arling, "was in a town called Glad Brook, Ia. I was snowbound there for seventy-six hours and nearly starved to death."

We read in the Fox News that Frank Morgan is a distant relative of Goethe, and that Goethe was about as well known in his day as a poet as Morgan is to-day as a film artist! And still they say that modesty is a thing of the past!

Somebody tapped Grace Stevens's wire in her dressing-room to find out who's that guy, "Red," whom she calls up half a dozen times a day. "Is this you, Red, old boy?" asked Miss Stevens. "Bow-wow!" said Red. Bang! went extension number two in disgust.

Order your FILM FUN early to prevent losing out on the "Confessions of a Motion Picture Actress."

George Larkin wants his admirers to know that the thrills he creates for the screen are strictly on the level—there is no trick photography or quick changes there. Larkin's stunts bring out such large crowds in Jacksonville that special police protection is necessary to keep the camera "lane" clear of people.

"Well, my little man, are you going to be a motion picture star when you grow up?" asked a kindly visitor of one of the dwarfs who acts with Marguerite Clark in "Snow White." "Grow up nothing, madam!" was the reply. "I'm old enough to be your father." As a matter of fact, the seven dwarfs in the picture are bona-fide midgets, whose ages range from forty to seventy years.

True Boardman has a grievance. He can't lose the name of "Stingaree," the character of the bold, bad Australian bushman which he created. Boardman's instincts run the other way—he wants to be known as the "good man of the films." He says that nobody calls Marin Sais a "Social Pirate," but that wherever he goes he is followed by a crowd of small boys who hail him affectionately as "Stingy."

Learn Music AT HOME!

Lessons Given New Method—Learn To Play By Note—Piano, Organ, Violin, Banjo, Mandolin, Cornet, Harp, Cello, Guitar, Piccolo, Clarinet, Trombone, Flute or to sing. Special Limited Offer of free weekly lessons. You pay only for music and postage, which is small. Money back guarantee. No extras. Beginners or advanced pupils. Everything illustrated, plain, simple, systematic. Free lectures each course. 16 years' success. Start at once. Write for Free Booklet Today—Now. U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, Box 314 225 Fifth Avenue, New York City

Pay as You Wish

Wear a genuine Lachnite for 10 full days. Put it to every diamond test. If you can tell it from a diamond send it back at our expense. If you decide to buy pay only a few cents a month. Write for catalog. Set In Solid Gold Lachnite Gems keep their dazzling fire forever. Cut by diamond cutters. Stand diamond tests—fire—acid and cut glass. Write today for new jewelry book—free. HAROLD LACHMAN CO. Dept. 1592, 12 N. Michigan Av., Chicago

THE MONO EX-RAY

With this eye glass you can apparently see through cloth or wood; see the bones in the body; makes the flesh look transparent. A wonderful optical illusion. By mail 10 cts. Stamps or coin. The Ardee Co., Box 205, Stamford, Conn.

LOOK! LOOK! 10c.

ENOUGH TO AMUSE THE WHOLE FAMILY Roll of Stage Money, Disappearing Coin Trick, Mysterious Bottle, How to cut glass with scissors, Wonderful Wine and Water Trick, Magic Age Teller, Rules for Love Making, 13 Tricks with Cards, 15 Parlor Games, 7 Fortune Telling Secrets, 39 Magical Experiments, 50 Money Making Secrets, 14 Flirtations, 7 Parlor Games, 10 Funny Readings, 71 Toasts, 21 Puzzles, and over 300 Jokes. All for 10c. JOS. H. DESKAU, Dept. 54, 491 Ridgewood Ave. Brooklyn, N.Y.

Incorporate Your Business In Arizona

Least cost, Greatest advantages. Cost not affected by amount of capital. Transact business and keep books anywhere. Stock made full-paid and non-assessable by using our forms. Laws, blanks and directions free. Special forms prepared without charge. Stoddard Incorporating Company, Box 8N, Phoenix, Arizona Branch Office: Van Nuys Building, Los Angeles, California

$—Old Coins Wanted—$

$4.25 EACH paid for U. S. Flying Eagle Cents dated 1856. $2 to $500 EACH paid for hundreds of Coins dated before 1910. Send TEN cents at once for our New Illustrated Coin Value Book, size 4 x 7. It may mean your fortune. Get posted. CLARKE COIN CO., Box 26, LE ROY, N. Y.

PERSONAL OR PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

100 Leather Card Case FREE with each order. Write for Samples and Type List. 50c ELITE CARD PRINT CO. Sta. 14, Jackson, Mich.

200 KINDS Iron, Wood Wire & Steel PUZZLES 2 wire leaders and trick card, 10 cents. WESTERN PUZZLE WORKS Dept. K. ST. PAUL, MINN.

WE PAY $80 A MONTH SALARY and furnish rig and all expenses to introduce our guaranteed poultry and stock powders. BIGLER COMPANY, X 430, Springfield, Illinois

WRITE FOR MONEY

Send us your ideas for Photoplays, Stories, etc. We will accept them in ANY form—correct FREE—sell on commission. BIG REWARDS! Hundreds making money. So can YOU! Write today for full details. Writer's Selling Service 28 Main Auburn, N. Y.

All the while she was playing the part of a happy, artless girl in "The Price of Silence," Vivian Rich was haunted by the knowledge that she was working to pay for an operation that might save her mother from blindness, due to an accident. To the everlasting credit of the young actress, be it told that, in spite of the grief and anxiety close to her heart, she played her part in the photodrama with captivating womanliness and charm.

Director Frank Reicher, of the Lasky company, wishes to announce that he has discovered a highly emotional cow, and that said cow will make its appearance as a member in good standing of the supporting cast of Marie Doro. Mr. Reicher is greatly taken with the way in which the honest bovine chews its cud and predicts great things for it on the screen.

Order your FILM FUN early to prevent losing out on the "Confessions of a Motion Picture Actress."

Slowly but expensively Vivian Martin is replacing the lovely new samples of the modern furniture maker's art, which make her new California home so beautiful, with genuine antiques. The line of "antique" dealers forms on the right every morning at the Martin home, and the price of gimlets, birdshot and other weapons for adding centuries of "age" to new furniture has risen violently.

Jack Pickford strolled into a Fifth Avenue department store recently and startled a floorwalker by announcing that he was looking for a pair of short trousers. The floorwalker took one look at Jack, who was dressed rather ultra-ultra, as it were, and led him gently to the riding suits department. "Breeches, you mean, do you not?" he murmured. "Not on your life!" declared Jack. "I want pants—plain pants—the kind I graduated from a few years ago. I am going back to them, my dear sir, because long trousers tickle my shins and make me nervous." And the dazed floorwalker stood by and watched while Jack actually bought a pair of short trousers. Not being a picture fan, of course he couldn't be expected to understand.

Instant Bunion Relief Prove It At My Expense

Don't send me one cent—just let me prove it to you as I have done for 57,532 others in the last six months. I claim to have the most successful remedy for bunions ever made and I want you to let me send you a treatment Free, entirely at my expense. I don't care how many so-called cures, or shields, or pads you ever tried without success—I don't care how disgusted you are with them all—you have not tried my remedy and I have such absolute confidence in it that I am going to send you a treatment absolutely FREE. It is a wonderful yet simple home remedy which relieves you almost instantly of the pain; it removes the cause of the bunion and thus the ugly deformity disappears—all this while you are wearing tighter shoes than ever. Just send your name and address and treatment will be sent you promptly in plain sealed envelope.

FOOT REMEDY CO., 3550 W. 26th St., Chicago.

Money In Your Ideas

C & C PATENTS PROTECT THEM FOR YOU Books "What to Invent" and "How to Obtain a Patent" sent free. Send rough sketch for free report regarding patentability. A C & C patent on your idea today may mean independence tomorrow. Manufacturers constantly writing us to buy patents. Patents advertised for sale at our expense. CHANDLER & CHANDLER, Patent Attorneys Est. 21 Years. 958 F Street, Washington, D. C.

New Ford Joke Book 1917

All the latest jokes on the Ford Auto. Hundreds of them and all good ones. Spring a new one on your neighbors. Large book with colored cover by mail, 10c

A High School Course In Two Years

Learn in your own home. Here is a thorough complete, and simplified high school course that you can finish in two years. Meets all college entrance requirements. Prepared by leading members of the faculties of universities and academies. Write for booklet. Send your name and address for our booklet and full particulars. No obligations. Write today—now. American School of Correspondence, Dept P1592 Chicago, U.S.A.

IF YOU ARE INTERESTED IN ENTERTAINING

Books, Novelties and Pretty Pictures, you should by all means get our catalogue. Send dime for good samples and our big illustrated catalogue of Beautiful Girls, Novelties, etc. You'll want more after seeing samples.

Globe Co. Dept. 21, 31 W. Chicago Ave., Chicago

CHALK-TALK

artists are always in demand. Get into a line of art that PAYS well. Let me start you out with a complete program, guaranteed to be the very best on the market for the money, $1. Particulars, testimonials and a sample evolution free.

CLYDE TRUMAN, Room C, 1755 E. 55th St., Cleveland, O.

MAGIC SCHOOLS POCKET FREE TRICK

Illustrated Catalogue Included. Send 6 Cents In Stamps

MAGIC CO., Sta., 5, 470 8th Avenue., NEW YORK

AT ONCE

—ten ladies to travel, demonstrate and sell well established line to our dealers. Previous experience not necessary. Good pay. Railroad fare paid. Goodrich Drug Co. Dept. 88. Omaha, Nebraska.

PHOTOPLAYS-STORIES-POEMS

Write for FREE CATALOG of best books on writing and selling Photoplays, Short Stories, Poems. Also our BARGAIN TYPEWRITER OFFER to authors. Atlas Publishing Co., 943, Cincinnati, O. $50 to $100 Weekly Writing moving picture plays in spare time. Great demand. YOU can write them. We show you how. Experience not necessary. Send for free booklet of valuable information and special Prize Offer. Chicago Photo-playright College, Box 278-611, Chicago

It is a shame for any woman to wear soiled white kid shoes!

Rub them lightly with a white cloth and a little—

CARBONA Cleaning Fluid

—and they will not only look like new, but will be dry and ready to wear in an instant.

This is true likewise of the light colored glazed kid shoes that are the fad of the day, because Carbona cannot injure the most delicate color.

Use Carbona day or night—
it cannot explode

15c.-25c.-50c.-$1.00 bottles. At all druggists

Shoes made with "F.B. & C." white, bronze, and fancy colored kids are cleaned with Carbona Cleaning Fluid.

BIG WONDER PACKAGE

1 Great North Pole Game
(size 18x11), 1 Big Roll Stage
Money, 1 Game Authors (48
Cards), 1 Cribbage Board,
1 Checker Board and Men,
1 Pack Pinochle cards (48 cards), 38 other Games, 19

Lessons in Magic, 1 Set of Dominoes, 27 Authograph Verses, 12 Money Making Secrets, Wireless Telegraph Code, 25 Pictures of Pretty Girls, 2 Puzzles, 100 Conundrums, 85 definitions of Flowers.
All the above for 10c. with large catalogue.

ROYAL GAME CO., Box 3 So. Norwalk, Conn

NEW SCIENTIFIC WONDER

"X-RAY" CURIO

PRICE

10c.

BOYS

PRICE 10c. SILVER ONLY—BIG FUN

You apparently see thru Clothes, Wood,
Stone, any object. See Bones in Flesh.

MARVEL MFG. CO. Dept. 45, NEW HAVEN, CONN.

Big KNOCKOUT Package

Contains One Dancing Scotchman 8 in high, will dance or walk. One new coin trick. One Pack of Hot Air cards, will win your Girl for you. One Roll of Stage Money. One Cribbage Board.
One Illustrated Booklet on How to Pitch. One Book on How to Throw your Voice. One checker board. 3
New Puzzles and 32 page 10
book of tricks. All for cts.

ARDEE Co. Box E Stamford Conn

Be an Artist

Comics, Cartoons, Commercial, Newspaper and Magazine Illustrating.
Pastel and Crayon Portraits.
Earn $25 to $200 a week.
By our simple method your talent is quickly developed without interfering with present work.

By Mail or Local Classes. Small sums you now fritter away pay your tution. Write for terms, list of successful pupils and instruction method FREE.
ASSOCIATED ART STUDIOS 2208 Flatiron Building, New York

TRIANGLE-FINE ARTS

CARMEL MYERS.

When Rabbi Myers, of Los Angeles, was consulted by David Griffith for historic details in the filming of "Intolerance," his daughter Carmel's unusual type of Oriental beauty attracted the attention of Griffith. He offered her a position with the Triangle-Fine Arts. Did she take it? Well, here she is.

Zoologically Speaking

The other day two young actors thought to have some fun with an old Irishman employed in the mechanical department of the studio. An auto filled with actors setting out for a location had just passed when the two came along.

"Pat," called out one, with a wink to his companion, "did you see an auto-load of monkeys just go by here?"

"Sure!" replied Pat instantly. "Did the two of ye fall off?"

Never Again

The following conversation was overheard between two of the colored "property boys" employed in one of the large Western studios.

"Sam," exclaimed the first one, "Ah ain't neveh goin' to sleep on one o' them horsehah mattresses again—no, suh!"

"Fo' why not?" asked his companion.

"Why, boy," replied the first, "Ah had th' nightmare all night!"

"Ship me somewheres east of Suez where the best is like the worst,
Where there aren't no Ten Commandments an' a man can raise a thirst."

K IPLING undoubtedly knew his "east of Suez" when he wrote "Mandalay" better than any man living, just as he knows lots of other things outside the ordinary ken; but the poverty-stricken, flea-bitten and malodorous Orient of the modern Mohammedan Turks presents many strong contrasts to the Orient of the great Abassid Caliphs, when Bagdad was the Metropolis of an Empire exceeding in extent the widest limits of Rome, and the center of a wealth, luxury and profligacy, the like of which the world has seldom seen; when the followers of the Prophet had carried the faith of Al Koran from the pillars of Hercules to the "Farthest Ind."

The first glimpse the Western world had of the wondrous life of this period was in the early part of the eighteenth century, when Galland issued the first part of the Thousand and One Nights, in a French translation from the Arabic, which at once became famous as "The Arabian Nights' Entertainments." Mutilated, fragmentary, paraphrastic though these tales were, the glamour of imagination, the marvelousness of the miracles and the gorgeousness of the life depicted at once secured an exceptional success. For nearly two centuries these few Oriental tales were allowed to masquerade in abridged condition in the literary world. Deprived of their beauty and originality, shorn of the very qualities which make them attractive, they were printed and reprinted until famous scholars, Mr. Payne and others, carried away by their mysterious power, resolved to give them and many others to the reading world in their original form.

As a result of the enterprize and devotion to art of John Payne, we have now in

"ORIENTAL TALES"

The Real Arabian Nights

The first complete and unexpurgated rendering into English of

The Book of The Thousand Nights and One Night

Translated from the Original Arabic by JOHN PAYNE and Specially Prepared for the Francois Villon Society of London

a full and candid reproduction of the literature of Persia, India and Arabia, a literature redolent with the smell of incense; with the din of plaintive and alluring music; with beautiful women and strange dances; with weird influences and voluptuous beauty.

A NEW WORLD

The Orient, with all its luxury and laxity has been unmasked. The sombre and fantastic tapestries have been drawn aside, and behold! there is a new world—strange and dim and distant—real and still unreal—devotional and yet emotional—spiritual and yet intensely physical—a world of men and women with ardent temperaments and strange beliefs—for the literature of the Oriental people was the story of their lives, intermingled with their dreams.

These "Oriental Tales" are more than a collection—they are the literature of the people of the old Eastern world—they are the children of rare imagination—of idealism and realism.

They tell the strength and force of the natural, and the strange and subtle beauty of the supernatural. Men and women stand confessed in all the freedom and candor of nature.

They are in all their wealth and variety and uniqueness the most marvelous expression of fascinating national manners and customs in the literature of the world.

We find within them a wonderful gathering of subtle truths and idle fancies—of human love in all its countless forms. The sadness of love—the wildness of love—love guided by duty and again by instinct—and always tinged by dreamy mysticism.

These volumes unmask and display for the first time to Western eyes life as it was actually passed by those who lived among the glories of Oriental ease and luxury and freedom when the world was young.

BRUNSWICK SUBSCRIPTION CO.

F. F.—2-17

Room 1116, Brunswick Bldg., New York City

Please mail me descriptive circular and special terms on Oriental Tales, without obligation on my part.

Name.....

Address.....

City..... State.....

We employ no agents.

A few sets of Oriental Tales will be available to prompt buyers at an especially low introductory price and liberal terms of payment. Full information mailed on receipt of coupon.

Save One-Third or Send It Back

YOU are the sole judge of these new diamond bargains. We will send you an exceptionally brilliant diamond, perfect in color and cutting, so that you may judge it for yourself. Wear it for 30 days and let your friends judge it. Then, if you do not think that you are saving at least one-third, send it back at our expense. All the latest and newest ideas in diamond jewelry and watches are yours to choose from, and yours to judge.

Diamonds Triangle Tested Sent on Thirty Days' Trial

Triangle Tested Diamonds must pass three rigid tests before they are offered to you. But, even then, you have 30 days in which to wear a Triangle Tested Diamond and judge it for yourself. You will be amazed at the fiery brilliance of Triangle Tested Diamonds. Your friends will say—"What a wonderful color." But you judge the value. Compare it with the values your local dealer offers—if you don't save one-third, send it back.

10c a Day After you have worn a Triangle Tested Diamond 30 days, decide then—and not before—whether or not you wish to buy it. If you wish to keep it, you may pay the low rock-bottom price at the rate of only a few cents a day. Terms as low as ten cents a day. If you don't want to keep it after the 30 days' free trial—send it back at our expense.

Send the Coupon for Diamond Book

Put your name and address in the coupon, or on a letter or post card now and get our new Diamond Book that tells the secret of Triangle Tested Diamonds. Find out how you are three times protected by the House of John A. Sterling & Son. The new Diamond Book—printed in full color—will be sent to you free and without obligation. Send coupon now.
John A. Sterling & Son, 1592 Ward Bldg., Chicago, U.S.A.

John A. Sterling & Son, 1592 Ward Bldg., Chicago

Gentlemen: Please send me your new book that tells me about Triangle Tested Diamonds and how I may get them on 30 days' free trial. It is distinctly understood that I am under no obligation of any kind.

Name

Address